Beer & Food

PAIRINGS

When people think of pairing an alcoholic beverage with food, their minds tend to jump to wine first. While there are wine and food pairings that are unassailably great, we believe beer is a more versatile and diverse beverage and has amazing potential to pair with all kinds of foods. As a basic rule of thumb, one should pair lighter foods with lighter beers (think pilsners, wheats, saisons, etc.) and bolder fare with bolder brews (stouts, porters, barleywines, and the like). Beyond that, you can attempt to find commonalities between, say, pairing a spicy dish with a spicy IPA, or a fruity dessert with a fruity lambic. You can also try pitting contrasting flavors against each other (think salty with sweet or bitter with fatty) to create a countless number of outcomes. What really gives beer the leg up on wine is the fact beer is a much more forgiving companion. With a few exceptions, there are no truly “wrong” food and beer pairings. If you think it’s going to taste good, go for it! Here are a few of our favorites...

SPINACH SALAD
